One clown.

Two crutches.

Zero legs.

A tragicomic journey towards the discovery of physical and emotional disability.

SYNOPSIS

When the light comes on after Mahler's music, Carlo Mò appears on the stage suspended in equilibrium on legless armpit crutches, the image is of a human M.

From this image begins a journey of discovery of his new physical state and search for remedies for any type of physical or emotional disability, turning the solutions into small creations.

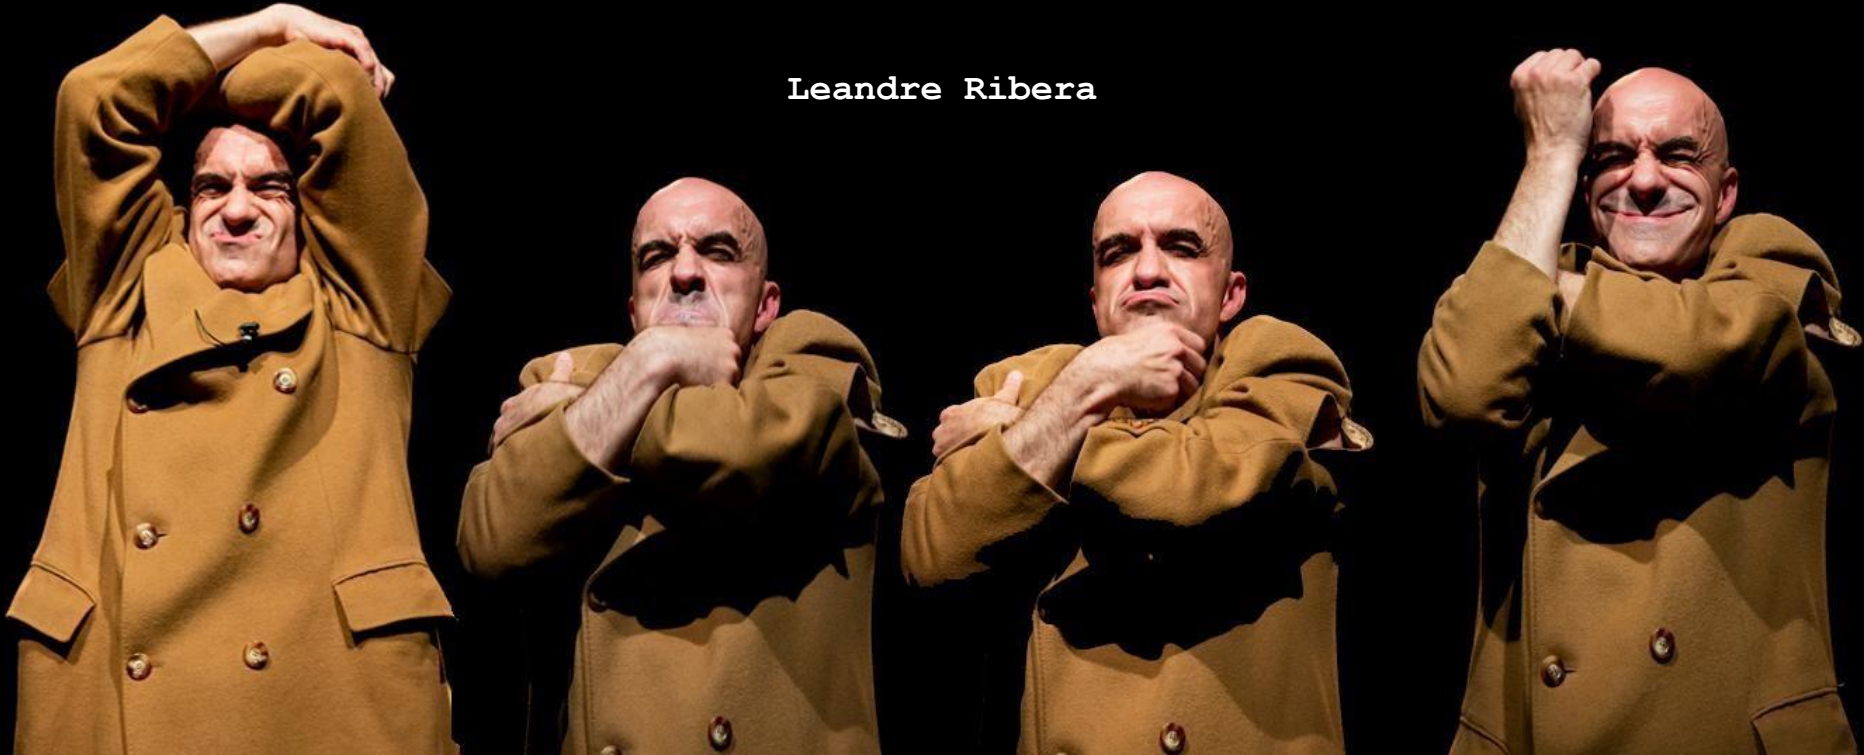

ABOUT THE SHOW

When the light comes on after Mahler's music, Carlo Mò appears on the stage suspended in equilibrium on legless armpit crutches, the image is of a human M. From this image begins a journey of discovery of his new physical state and search for remedies for any type of physical or emotional disability, turning the solutions into small creations.

“There are people who seem funny, people who act funny, others who do funthings... Carlo Mò is funny, and in me, me, I am overwhelmed with emotion in every gesture.”
